

EVAGGELIA EFSTRATIADOU
ASSISTANT PROFESSOR
CLINICAL SPEECH & LANGUAGE THERAPY
DEPT OF SPEECH & LANGUAGE THERAPY
UNIVERSITY OF THE PELOPONNESE

Evangelia - Antonia (Eva) Efstratiadou graduated from the Department of Speech and Language Therapy of the TEI Patras. She obtained a post-graduate degree (City University of London, 2011) and a PhD in UK (City University of London, 2018). Her doctoral thesis was conducted within the research project "THALES: Levels of disorder in Greek aphasic speech: Relationships with processing deficits, brain regions and therapeutic approaches" at the National and Kapodistrian University of Athens. She received a scholarship from the United Kingdom for her doctoral studies. In December 2021, she was appointed Assistant Professor at the Department of Speech and Language Therapy, University of Peloponnese with the specialization: "Clinical Speech and Language Therapy with a focus on assessment and/or intervention". Her research interests include the investigation of the effectiveness of speech and language therapy interventions for people with aphasia and other communication disorders and the impact of these interventions on well-being, social participation and QOL of people with acquired language disorders; investigating QOL of people with stroke and aphasia; and examining communication disorders across the lifespan. Her research has been published in international journals, conference proceedings and book chapters.